Refrain from letting these not positive thoughts enter your mind and be more confident of yourself. That shall lead you to where you want to go this time.
	It is our past that has paved a future for us today. It is because of where we have been that we are here now. For anything new that we are to do, it is important to reflect on what has already been done and how good we were at it. It could tell you more about your abilities and potential than you already know of. It shall also help you not repeat the same mistakes you had committed earlier. You are going to evolve as a better person when you take a look at what brought you where you are this time. It is good time in your life to do this evaluation.
	When you started it, you were full with energy and enthusiasm, and you saw nothing else, but now motivation turning into powerless. Over time, due to temporary planet's influence you seem to have lost the zeal and are now feeling tired of it. However, in reality hardly anything has changed since your last thought of living it up. We are used to believing that we should pay the price for the goals we wish to achieve. However, it shouldn't be that way all the time. You are making an effort to achieve something you have desired for a long time, putting you in a situation of despair. But are you not being hard on yourself? It's important to first relax and breathe. You are destined to reach your goal, and you may not even should pay the price you are thinking of. Before people were worried about hitting on the target and making it on time, it was quite an easy-going world, there were hardly any restrictions to following any routine and doing things in a particular manner. Following from the same, at present you may feel like your aspirations are overdue, and that now it might just be too late to begin working on it. However, this notion has not been around for too long. Dreams are never time-bound and there is nothing as a "proper time" to follow them. Try not to hold yourself back, just go for them like there is no time-constraint.

You could have diverted from a desired target or a goal in your life. Some time back it may have been something that you wished to happen, but you seem to have deviated from that now.
